B. Local Government Issues and/or Studies1. Issues and/or Studies Currently Underway:

During 2003, the NEJAC worked on issues related to pollution prevention, as well as issues related to cumulative risks and impacts. During the year, the NEJAC completed its recommendations and report, "Advancing Environmental Justice Through Pollution Prevention," while initiating efforts to study environmental justice and cumulative risks and impacts. Both issues have direct relevance to state and local government concerns during the study and formulation of recommendations. The NEJAC has committed to a deliberative process that involves representatives of all stakeholder groups, including state and local governments. For example, the work group convened to study the cumulative risk/impacts issue includes among its 20 members, representatives of four state and local governments.

2. Issues and/or Studies Planned (November 2003 through December 2004):

The April 2004 meeting of the NEJAC will focus on environmental justice and cumulative risks and impacts. Let me know if you need information about additional issues that may have some relevance to state and local government concerns and which are being addressed by the individual NEJAC subcommittees.
